

Hi,

We are excited to share our latest newsletter with you, featuring captivating articles and insights about the world of durian.

In this edition, we highlight the unique ways durian has made headlines globally. As you may already know, durian holds a special place in China as the most imported and cherished fruit. Recently, a doctor in Changsha, Central China's Hunan Province, ingeniously used durian's popularity to educate primary and secondary school students about the power of medical technology. By conducting a CT scan on a durian, the doctor helped students grasp the principles of CT imaging more easily.

In another exciting development, a store in Bali, a beloved tourist destination, has introduced a delectable creation called durian kebabs. These mouthwatering kebabs, filled with grilled durian and tantalizing combinations like chocolate, cheese, Oreos, and nata de coco, have been a huge hit. The store sells out almost daily and utilizes up to 16KG of durian per day to meet the high demand.

With the upcoming durian season, we hope for abundant harvests and great success for all growers, allowing us all to savor the exquisite Musang King variety.

We wish you a wonderful month ahead!

Best Regards,
Durian Projects Group

Doctor uses CT scanning to check durian pulp when teaching

A doctor in Hunan, China came up with a unique way to capture his students' attention using their love of durian. The doctor used durian fruit in order to showcase the imaging effect of CT, so that students could more easily understand its principles. Durian has less water content than other fruits but has a higher density, making it very clear in CT scans.

Woman in Singapore attempts to buy durian online and loses RM165k

A 50-year-old woman's love for the Musang King durian has cost her dearly in Singapore. She attempted to purchase the fruit online after seeing it advertised for only 6 SGD (20 RM). Unfortunately, she fell victim to a fraudulent payment app called E2 Mall, resulting in a loss of 50,000 SGD (165,000 RM). The app contained malware that allowed unauthorized transfers from her bank account.
